(b) where, if a property in respect of which an election under paragraph (a) is made had been acquired by the individual at the emigration time at a cost equal to its fair market value at the emigration time and had been disposed of by the individual immediately before the particular time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value immediately before the particular time, the application of subsection 40(3.7) would reduce the amount that would, but for subsection 40(3.7) and this subsection, be the individual's loss from the disposition, 30 35

(i) the individual is deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)) in respect of the emigration time for proceeds of disposition equal to the total of 40

(iii) for the purposes of section 119, the individual is deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the particular time;

(c) if the individual so elects in the individual's return of income for the year, in respect of each property that the individual owned throughout the period and is deemed by paragraph (1)(b) to have disposed of on becoming resident in Canada, notwithstanding paragraphs (4)(b) and (1)(c) the individual's proceeds of disposition at the time of disposition (within the meaning assigned by paragraph (4)(b)), and the individual's cost of acquiring the property at the particular time are deemed to be those proceeds and that cost, determined without reference to this paragraph, minus the least of

(i) the amount that would, but for this paragraph, have been the individual's gain from the disposition of the property deemed by paragraph (4)(b) to have occurred,

(ii) the fair market value of the property at the particular time, and

(iii) the amount that the individual specifies in respect of the property in the election; and

(d) notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessment of tax payable under the Act by the individual for any taxation year that is before the year that includes the particular time and that is not before the year that includes the emigration time shall be made as is necessary to take an election under this subsection into account, except that no such assessment shall affect the computation of interest payable under this Act to or by a taxpayer in respect of any period that is before the day on which the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year that includes the particular time is filed.

(ii) where the subsequent year does not immediately follow the distribution year, the amount determined under this paragraph in respect of the trust for the taxation year that immediately precedes the subsequent year; and 10

(E) an interest in or option in respect of a property described in any of clauses (B) to (D), whether or not that property exists was greater than 50% of the fair market value of all of its properties, and 25

(ii) more than 50% of the fair market value of the interest was derived directly or indirectly from one or any combination of

(l) a property deemed by any provision of this Act to be taxable except that 40

(m) for the purposes of this definition, a property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (l) is deemed to include an interest in or option in respect of the property, whether or not that property exists,

(n) for the purposes of sections 2, 128.1 and 150, and for the purpose 45 of applying paragraphs 85(1)(i) and 97(2)(c) to a disposition by a non-resident person, "taxable Canadian property" includes

- (i) a Canadian resource property,
- (ii) a timber resource property,
- (iii) an income interest in a trust resident in Canada, 5
- (iv) a right to a share of the income or loss under an agreement referred to in paragraph 96(1.1)(a), and
- (v) a life insurance policy in Canada, and 10

(o) "taxable Canadian property" does not include a share of the capital stock of a non-resident-owned investment corporation if, on the first day of the year, the corporation owns neither taxable Canadian property nor property referred to in any of 15 subparagraphs (n)(i) to (iii);

(2) Subsection (1) applies after October 1, 1996.

INCOME TAX APPLICATION RULES

29. (1) Subsection 26(30) of the Income Tax Application Rules is replaced by the following: 20

Additions to taxable Canadian property

(30) Subsections (1.1) to (29) do not apply to a disposition by a non-resident person of a property

- (a) that the person last acquired before April 27, 1995; 25
- (b) that would not be a taxable Canadian property immediately before the disposition if section 115 were read as it applied to dispositions that occurred on April 26, 1995; and
- (c) that would be a taxable Canadian property immediately before the 30 disposition if section 115 were read as it applied to dispositions that occurred on January 1, 1996.

(2) Subsection (1) applies to dispositions that occur after October 1, 1996.

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

30. (1) Subsections 2606(2) of the Income Tax Regulations is replaced by the following:

(2) If section 114 of the Act applies in respect of an individual for a taxation year, the reference in subsection (1) to "his income for the taxation year" shall be read as a reference to the amount of the individual's taxable income for the year and, for the purpose of this Part, the individual's income for the year from carrying on a business 5 in any place shall be computed by reference only to a business the income from which is included in computing the individual's taxable income for the year.

(2) Subsection (1) applies to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years.

Explanatory Notes

PREFACE

These explanatory notes describe, for discussion purposes, proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act, the Income Tax Application Rules and the Income Tax Regulations. The proposed amendments are described, clause by clause, for the assistance of Members of Parliament, taxpayers and their professional advisors.

The Honourable Paul Martin
Minister of Finance

Clause 1

Emigrant's stock options

ITA

7(1.6)

Section 7 of the Income Tax Act deals with employee stock options. The section sets out rules for determining the amount to be included in an employee's income in respect of the exercise or sale of rights under an employment-related stock option arrangement.

Subsection 7(1.1) provides that the employment benefit in respect of shares of a Canadian-controlled private corporation issued under an employee stock option plan is, under certain conditions, to be included in the employee's income only in the taxation year in which the employee disposes of or exchanges the shares.

New subsection 7(1.6) applies where an individual who holds shares emigrates from Canada and is treated as having disposed of the shares under subsection 128.1(4) of the Act. In those circumstances, subsection (1.6) deems the shares, for the purposes of section 7 and paragraph 110(1)(d.1) of the Act, not to have been disposed of because of the emigration. As a result, emigration from Canada will not by itself trigger an income inclusion under section 7. However, because the share will still be treated as having been disposed of for the purposes of the Act, the emigrant individual will realize any gain that has accrued on the share since it was acquired. Readers may consult the notes on new paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) for more information.

New subsection 7(1.6) applies after 1992.

Clause 2Valuation of Inventory

Section 10 of the Act sets out rules for the valuation of inventory for the purpose of computing a taxpayer's income or loss from a business. These amendments ensure the appropriate measurement of a non-resident's income or loss from a business carried on in Canada.

Removing property from inventory

ITA

10(12)

New subsection 10(12) applies to a non-resident taxpayer who ceases to use a property, described in the inventory of a business or part of a business that is carried on by the taxpayer in Canada, otherwise than by a disposition of the property. For example, subsection 10(12) applies if a non-resident taxpayer removes a property from the inventory of a business or part of a business carried on in Canada and adds that property to the inventory of a business or part of a business carried on by the taxpayer in another country. The time at which the taxpayer ceases to use the property in connection with a business or part of a business in Canada is referred to in subsection 10(12) and in this note as the "particular time".

Where new subsection 10(12) applies, the taxpayer is treated as having disposed of the property immediately before the particular time, for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value at the particular time. The taxpayer is treated as having received the proceeds in the course of carrying on the business in which the property was formerly used, in the taxation year that includes the particular time.

New subsection 10(12) applies after ANNOUNCEMENT DATE.

Adding property to inventory

ITA
10(13)

New subsection 10(13) applies to a non-resident taxpayer who adds a property (otherwise than by acquiring the property) to the inventory of a business or part of a business that is carried on by the taxpayer in Canada. For example, new subsection 10(13) applies if a taxpayer removes a property from the inventory of a business or part of a business carried on in another country and adds that property to the inventory of a business or part of a business carried on by the taxpayer in Canada. The time at which the taxpayer adds the property to the inventory of the business or part of a business in Canada is referred to in subsection 10(13) and in this note as the "particular time".

Where new subsection 10(13) applies, the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the property at the particular time at a cost equal to the property's fair market value at the particular time.

New subsection 10(13) applies after ANNOUNCEMENT DATE.

Work in progress

ITA
10(14)

Section 34 of the Act provides an exception to full accrual accounting in calculating the income of a business that is a professional practice by allowing the income to be determined without taking into account any professional work in progress at year end.

New subsection 10(14) provides, for the purposes of new subsections 10(12) and 10(13), that a property included in the inventory of a business includes professional work in progress that would be so included if paragraph 34(a) (the basic rule described above) did not apply. Any work in progress that would ordinarily figure in inventory will thus be subject to the deemed disposition under subsection 10(12) or the deemed acquisition under subsection 10(13).

New subsection 10(14) applies after ANNOUNCEMENT DATE.

Clause 3

ITA

28(4) and (4.1)

Section 28 of the Act provides rules concerning the computation of income for taxpayers who, for income tax purposes, use the cash-basis method of accounting in respect of farming or fishing businesses. Subsection 28(4) applies, under certain conditions, to require the inclusion of the value of a non-resident taxpayer's accounts receivable in calculating the taxpayer's income for the year. Subsection 28(4.1) applies, under certain circumstances, to treat a non-resident taxpayer as having disposed of inventory owned by the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value.

Subsection 28(4) is amended, for the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, as a consequence of changes to section 114 of the Act. The amendment makes no substantive change, but keeps the reference in step with the changes to section 114. Readers may refer to the notes on section 114 for more details.

With the addition of new subsection 10(11) of the Act and the amendment of section 128.1 of the Act (changes in residence), subsection 28(4.1) has become redundant, and is repealed with application after ANNOUNCEMENT DATE.

Clause 4

Capital Losses - General Rules

ITA

40

Section 40 of the Act provides rules for determining a taxpayer's gain or loss from the disposition of a property.

Subclause 4(1)

Losses of non-resident

ITA
40(3.7)

New subsection 40(3.7) is a "stop-loss" rule that may reduce the loss of an individual from the disposition of a property at a particular time, where the individual was non-resident at any time before the particular time. In general terms, this stop-loss rule applies where an individual has received dividends while a non-resident, and later realizes a loss on the property (whether a share, an interest in a partnership or an interest in a trust) in respect of which the dividends were received.

The Act already includes, in section 112 and related provisions, a comprehensive stop-loss system for corporations. Instead of duplicating that system, new subsection 40(3.7) adapts it to apply to losses otherwise realized by individuals who are or have been non-residents.

For the purposes of applying subsections 100(4), 107(1) and 112(3) to (3.32) and (7) of the Act, new subsection 40(3.7) deems an individual to be a corporation in respect of dividends received while the individual was non-resident, and deems any taxable dividends received by the individual as a non-resident to have been deductible under section 112 when received. The effect of this is that some or all dividends received while non-resident may reduce the individual's loss on a share, partnership interest or trust interest.

New subsection 40(3.7) applies to dispositions of property that occur after ANNOUNCEMENT DATE by individuals who ceased to be resident after October 1, 1996.

Subclause 4(2)Additions to taxable Canadian property

ITA

As a result of changes to the definition of "taxable Canadian property," certain properties acquired before April 27, 1995 became taxable Canadian properties on that date. Subsection 40(9) was enacted to provide rules for computing a non-resident person's gain or loss from the disposition of such a property, prorating the amount of gain or loss determined without reference to the subsection according to the number of months the person held the property before May 1995.

Effective October 2, 1996 the definition of "taxable Canadian property" is again amended so that certain properties acquired before that date will have become taxable Canadian properties on that date. Subsection 40(9) is amended to clarify that the formula it sets out applies only to gains or losses realized on the disposition of properties that became taxable Canadian properties on April 27, 1995.

Amended subsection 40(9) applies to dispositions that occur after April 26, 1995.

Clause 5Change in use

ITA

45(1)(d)

Subsection 45(1) of the Act provides for a deemed disposition and reacquisition of property where its use is altered, wholly or in part, from a personal to an income-earning or income-producing use, or vice versa. This "change in use" rule applies for the purpose of the subdivision of the Act that deals with taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses.

New paragraph 45(1)(d) provides that, in applying subsection 45(1) in respect of a non-resident taxpayer, any reference to "gaining or producing income" is to be read as a reference to gaining or producing income from a source in Canada. As a result, a non-resident who ceases to use a property to earn income in Canada and begins to use it instead to earn income outside Canada will be treated as having disposed of the property.

New paragraph 45(1)(d) applies after October 1, 1996.

Clause 6

Adjustments to Cost Base

ITA
53(3)

Section 53 of the Act sets out rules for determining the adjusted cost base of a capital property for the purpose of calculating any capital gain or loss on its disposition.

Subsection 53(3) provides that, for the purposes of certain deductions required to be made in determining the adjusted cost base of interests in non-resident trusts, property of a trust is taxable Canadian property (TCP) at a particular time if the property would be TCP if the trust had disposed of the property at that time.

Subsection 53(3) is repealed with effect after October 1, 1996. This amendment is strictly consequential to changes in the definition of TCP (described in the notes on subsection 248(1) of the Act) and does not represent any change in tax policy.

Clause 7

ITA
66(4)

Subsection 66(4) of the Act sets out the deduction that may be claimed for foreign exploration and development expenses (FEDE) incurred by a taxpayer resident in Canada. A taxpayer's minimum deduction for a taxation year under this subsection is 10% of the taxpayer's undeducted FEDE balance at the end of the year. An additional portion of a taxpayer's undeducted FEDE balance may be deducted by a taxpayer for a taxation year, essentially to the extent of the taxpayer's foreign resource income in excess of that minimum amount.

Subclause 7(1)

ITA

66(4)(a)(i)

Subparagraph 66(4)(a)(i) of the Act is amended so that a taxpayer's FEDE balance takes into account only expenses incurred while the taxpayer was resident in Canada. As a result, a taxpayer who becomes resident in Canada cannot deduct FEDE that was incurred before becoming resident in Canada. This amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years.

The amendment to subparagraph 66(4)(a)(i) does not prevent the creation of FEDE as a consequence of a taxpayer becoming resident Canada. In these circumstances, there is a deemed acquisition of the taxpayer's foreign resource properties at fair market value pursuant to paragraph 128.1(1)(c) of the Act. The deemed cost of the foreign resource properties qualifies as FEDE under paragraph (c) of the FEDE definition in subsection 66(15) of the Act.

Subclause 7(2)

ITA

66(4)(b)(i.1)

New subparagraph 66(4)(b)(i.1) of the Act is introduced to allow the full amount of a taxpayer's undeducted FEDE balance to be deducted in the event that the taxpayer ceases to be resident in Canada. This measure is consistent with existing income tax rules which allow emigrating taxpayers to claim a terminal loss on depreciable property as a consequence of deemed dispositions under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. The amendment, which applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years, will allow the FEDE deduction to be claimed for the last taxation year during which a taxpayer is resident in Canada. (Under paragraph 128.1(4)(a) of the Act, a new taxation year for a corporate taxpayer starts at the time that the taxpayer ceases to be resident in Canada.)

Clause 8

ITA

66.7

Section 66.7 of the Act includes what are commonly known as the "successor rules" with respect to resource properties and expenditures.

Subclause 8(1)

ITA

66.7(2)(a)(i)

Subsection 66.7(2) allows a corporation to claim deductions with respect to foreign exploration and development expenses (FEDE) incurred by one or more original owners, where property has been acquired in circumstances to which the successor rules apply.

Subparagraph 66.7(2)(a)(i) is amended so that the successor FEDE that may be deducted by a successor corporation in respect of an original owner's FEDE is limited to FEDE incurred while the original owner was resident in Canada. This change is parallel to the amendment, described above, to subparagraph 66(4)(a)(i).

This amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years.

Subclause 8(2)

ITA

66.7(10)(f)

Under subsection 66.7(10) of the Act, a corporation is treated as a successor for the purposes of the successor rules in section 66.7 after an acquisition of control of the corporation. Under paragraph 66.7(10)(e), resource expenses incurred by the corporation prior to the change of control are deemed to have been incurred by an original owner of resource properties owned at the time of the acquisition of control.

New paragraph 66.7(10)(f) ensures that the deemed original owner had the same status with regard to residence in Canada before the acquisition of control of a corporation as the corporation itself. This amendment is consequential to an amendment, described above, to subparagraph 66.7(2)(a)(i) affecting successor FEDE claims.

This amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years.

Clause 9

Losses - non-resident

ITA

111(9)

Section 111 of the Act establishes the extent to which a taxpayer is permitted to deduct amounts in computing taxable income for a taxation year in respect of losses of other years. Subsection 111(9) sets out special limits that apply to carryovers from taxation years during which a taxpayer is not resident in Canada.

Subsection 111(9) is amended, for the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, as a consequence of changes to section 114 of the Act. The amendment replaces a reference to the portion of the year referred to in paragraph 114(b) with a reference to the part of the year throughout which the taxpayer was non-resident. This keeps the reference in step with the changes to section 114. Readers may refer to the notes on section 114 for more details.

Clause 10

Part-year residents

ITA

114, 114.1

Section 114 of the Act provides rules for computing the taxable income of an individual (often referred to as a "part-year resident") who is resident in Canada for some period or periods in a taxation year, and is non-resident for the rest of the year.

In its current form, section 114 in effect applies a two-stage computation. First, it adds the individual's income for the resident part of the year and the individual's taxable income earned in Canada (a term defined in subsection 115(1) of the Act) for the non-resident part of the year, in each case as though the part were the whole year. Second, it allows those deductions (or parts of deductions) in computing taxable income that can reasonably be considered to apply to the resident part of the year.¹

This division of the year into separate parts can produce unclear and perhaps inconsistent effects. For example, assume that an individual who emigrates from Canada on June 30 holds portfolio shares that have an adjusted cost base of $100 and a fair market value of $160 on emigration. Under both the existing and the proposed new versions of section 128.1 of the Act, the individual is treated as having disposed of the shares and realized the $60 accrued gain before ceasing to be resident in Canada, and as having reacquired the shares, as a non-resident, at a cost of $160. Assume further that the individual actually disposes of the shares on September 30 of the same year, for $140.

On these facts, the individual has a gain of $60 in the resident part of the year, and a loss of $20 in the non-resident part. The result is an overall gain of $40, assuming that the post-departure loss can offset the pre-departure gain. However, section 114's separate calculation of the resident-period income and the non-resident period taxable income earned in Canada makes it uncertain that the two can be offset in this way.

Section 114 is amended to avoid such uncertainties, as well as to simplify the application of the rule. Amended section 114's starting-point for calculating a part-year resident's taxable income is, in paragraph 114(a), the individual's income for the year, counting only those amounts of income and losses for the non-resident period that are included in computing taxable income earned in Canada under paragraphs 115(1)(a) to (c) of the Act.

Paragraphs 114(b) and (c) set out the deductions that the part-year resident may take in computing taxable income. Paragraph (b) allows the deduction of loss carryovers permitted by subsection 111(1) of the Act. It also allows the deductions permitted by paragraphs 110(1)(d), (d.1) and (d.2) (the non-taxable 1/4 of employee stock option and prospector's and grubstaker's share benefits) and paragraph 110(1)(f) (various social benefits, amounts exempt from Canadian tax under a tax treaty, and income from employment with certain international organizations), to the extent these relate to amounts that have been included in computing the paragraph (a) amount. Paragraph (c) allows any other deduction that the Act permits in computing taxable income. A deduction under paragraph (c) is allowed to the extent the deduction either can reasonably be considered to be applicable to the resident period or, if all or substantially all of the individual's income for the non-resident period is included in the paragraph (a) amount, can reasonably be considered to apply to the non-resident period.

1. Deductions are not provided for the non-resident part of the year because they are already taken into account in computing taxable income earned in Canada.

In the example described above, amended section 114 will include both the resident-period gain and the non-resident-period loss in computing the single paragraph (a) income amount. The part-year resident will thus be treated as having realized a gain of $40 for the year as a whole.

Amended section 114 applies to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years. A number of consequential amendments ensure that these changes are reflected in other provisions of the Act that refer to section 114.

Section 114.1 of the Act is a technical rule that applies a special reading of paragraphs 115(2)(b), (b.1) and (c) of the Act, for the purpose of applying section 114, to ensure that certain time references in those paragraphs accommodate cases to which section 114 applies. With the restructuring of section 114, this rule is no longer needed. Section 114.1 is repealed for the 1998 and subsequent taxation years.

Clause 11

Non-resident's taxable income in Canada

ITA

115

Section 115 of the Act determines the amount of a non-resident person's income that is subject to tax under Part I of the Act. This amount is referred to as the non-resident's "taxable income earned in Canada".

Subclause 11(1)

ITA

115(1)(a)

Paragraphs 115(1)(a) to (c) set out special assumptions that are applied in computing the taxable income earned in Canada of a non-resident taxpayer. The general effect of these paragraphs, in conjunction with the deduction provided for treaty-protected income because of the reference to paragraph 110(1)(f) in paragraph 115(1)(d), is to include in this computation only income and losses from sources in Canada, and of those only amounts that are not treaty-protected.

Subparagraph 115(1)(a)(i) includes in this computation income from the duties of offices and employments that the non-resident person in Canada performs in Canada. Subparagraph 115(1)(a)(i) is amended to include as well income from offices and employments performed by the non-resident person outside of Canada, if the person was resident in Canada at the time the duties were performed. This ensures that if an individual who is a former resident of Canada receives, as a non-resident, income relating to work the individual performed outside Canada at a time when the individual was resident in Canada, the income is subject to Canadian tax.

This amendment generally applies to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years. In addition, if an individual ceased to be resident in Canada after 1992 and before October 2, 1996, and the individual makes the election described in clause 18, this amendment applies to income received by the individual after that cessation of residence.

The clause 18 election in effect backdates the explicit exclusion of certain income rights and trust interests from the deemed disposition immediately before emigration. The basis for excluding the rights in question from the deemed disposition is that they represent entitlements to future income that will itself be subject to Canadian tax when it is received by a non-resident. Linking the application of amended subparagraph 115(1)(a)(i) to the election ensures that the Act does tax that income, where it relates to employment exercised abroad by a resident of Canada.

Subclause 11(2)

ITA

115(1)(b) and (b.1)

Paragraph 115(1)(b) lists the types of property (called "taxable Canadian property" or TCP) in respect of which taxable gains and allowable capital losses are considered in the calculation of a non-resident's taxable income earned in Canada. As a result of the relocation of the general TCP definition to subsection 248(1) of the Act, paragraph 115(1)(b) can be greatly simplified. In its new form, the paragraph simply refers to taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses on TCP that is not treaty-protected property.

Paragraph 115(1)(b.1) excludes from the computation of a non-resident's taxable income earned in Canada any taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss from the disposition of a taxable Canadian property that was treaty-protected property of the non-resident. Since this exclusion now forms part of amended paragraph 115(1)(b), paragraph 115(1)(b.1) can be repealed.

Amended paragraph 115(1)(b) generally applies after October 1, 1996. Since the definition (and the concept) of "treaty-protected property" was introduced only with the 1998 Budget, and applies for the 1998 and later taxation years, a transitional version of amended paragraph 115(1)(b) omits the reference to treaty-protected property for dispositions that occur before the 1998 taxation year.

Subclause 11(3)

ITA

115(2)(b) and (b.1)

Subsection 115(2) applies, in certain special circumstances, to tax remuneration and specified other amounts received by a non-resident. Paragraphs 115(2)(b) and (b.1) apply subsection 115(2) to post-secondary students at Canadian institutions and former Canadian residents who have moved abroad to carry out research or similar work under a grant. The paragraphs are amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, to update their language to reflect current drafting styles. The amendments make no substantive change to the paragraphs.

Clause 12

Disposition by non-resident person of certain property

ITA

116

Section 116 of the Act establishes procedures for collecting tax from non-residents on the disposition of taxable Canadian property, Canadian resource properties, and certain other properties.

Subclauses 12(1) to (3)

ITA

116(1), (5.1) and (5.2)

Where a non-resident plans to dispose of property the proceeds from the disposition of which are subject to Canadian tax, the non-resident can obtain a "clearance certificate" from the Minister of National Revenue. The certificate, which is provided as well to the prospective purchaser, verifies that the non-resident vendor has made arrangements for the payment of any resulting tax. Without such a certificate, the purchaser may be required to remit a portion of the purchase price to the Receiver General.

Subsections 116(1), (5.1) and (5.2) set out some of the rules and procedures for this process. These subsections are amended, with application after October 1, 1996, to reflect the amended definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1) of the Act. In particular, that amended definition clarifies that a property's status as taxable Canadian property does not depend on its being disposed of; this allows the references in these subsections to be simplified.

Subclause 12(4)

ITA

116(6)(a)

The various rules in section 116 of the Act, which provides a withholding procedure for purchasers of certain properties, do not apply where the property is excluded property. "Excluded property" is defined in subsection 116(6).

Paragraph 116(6)(a) provides that any property referred to in subparagraph 115(1)(b)(ix) of the Act (property that is deemed by a provision of the Act to be taxable Canadian property) is excluded property. With effect after October 1, 1996, paragraph 116(6)(a) is amended to provide that property described in paragraph (1) of the definition of "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1) of the Act is excluded property. This change has no substantive effect, and is strictly consequential to the movement of the main definition "taxable Canadian property" from paragraph 115(1)(b) to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Clause 13

Former resident – credit for tax paid

New section 119 of the Act provides a special tax credit in certain cases where the "stop-loss" rule in new subsection 40(3.7) of the Act applies to an individual (other than a trust) who ceased to be resident in Canada.

Under amended subsection 128.1 of the Act, individuals who emigrate from Canada are treated as having disposed of most properties, for proceeds equal to the properties' fair market value. Such an individual may therefore be treated as having realized an accrued gain immediately before leaving Canada, and will be subject to tax on the gain. If the individual subsequently receives dividends in respect of the same property, a loss realized on a later disposition of the property may be reduced by new subsection 40(3.7), and thus may not be available to offset the gain that resulted from the subsection 128.1(4) deemed disposition. Part or all of the tax liability arising from the gain would thus remain payable. However, the individual may also have paid tax on those post-departure dividends, under Part XIII of the Act.

New section 119 addresses this possible overlap between the tax resulting from the subsection 128.1(4) deemed disposition of a capital property and the Part XIII tax on dividends that reduce the taxpayer's loss on the property. In general terms, the rule allows a tax credit equal to the tax on those dividends, up to the amount of the tax on the capital gain that arose on emigration from Canada.

More specifically, section 119 allows the individual to deduct, in computing tax otherwise payable under Part I for the taxation year in which subsection 128.1(4) treated the individual as having disposed of the property, the lesser of two amounts. The first amount, described in paragraph 119(a), is in effect the amount of tax attributable to the gain on the property. This amount is computed as the proportion of the individual's Part I tax for that year that the taxable capital gain on the particular property is of the individual's total income for the year, as determined under new paragraph 114(1)(a) of the Act.

The second amount, set out in paragraph 119(b), is the Part XIII withholding tax paid (or deemed to have been paid) by the individual on dividends that, under new subsection 40(3.7), have reduced the individual's loss from the disposition of the property. This amount is computed as the proportion of the individual's Part XIII tax in respect of dividends in respect of the property that the subsection 40(3.7) loss reduction is of the total amount of those dividends.

A consequential amendment to subsection 152(6) of the Act ensures that any necessary assessments of tax will be made in order to take account of the effect of new section 119.

New section 119 applies to dispositions after ANNOUNCEMENT DATE by individuals who cease to be resident after October 1, 1996.

Clause 14

120

Section 120 of the Act sets out rules that integrate the federal and provincial income tax systems for individuals. Subsection 120(1) imposes an additional amount of federal tax on income that is not subject to provincial or territorial tax, while subsection 120(2) provides part of the tax abatement for income earned in Quebec (the rest is found in legislation concerning federal-provincial fiscal arrangements).

Subclauses 14(1) and (2)

ITA

120(3) and (4)

For the purposes of subsections 120(1) and (2) of the Act, subsection 120(3) defines the phrase "the individual's income for the year" where sections 114 or 115 of the Act – dealing with part-year residents and non-residents, respectively – apply in respect of the individual for the year. Subsection 120(3) is amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, as a consequence of changes to section 114 of the Act. The amendment makes no substantive change, but keeps the reference in step with the changes to section 114. Readers may refer to the notes on section 114 for more details.

Subsection 120(4) includes a definition of "tax otherwise payable under this Part". The amendment to this subsection, which applies to the 1996 and subsequent taxation years, excludes from the definition any deduction from tax in respect of income averaging for farmers and fishers under section 119 of the Act.

Clause 15

Deduction from tax payable where employment out of Canada

ITA

122.3(1)(e)

Section 122.3 of the Act provides a tax credit to Canadian residents who are employed outside Canada by a specified employer for at least six months in connection with resource, construction, installation, agricultural or engineering contracts or for the purpose of obtaining those contracts. This credit – commonly known as the Overseas Employment Tax Credit (OETC) - effectively eliminates 80% of the Canadian tax arising on the first $100,000 of salary or wages earned from such foreign employment.

The OETC is determined by multiplying an employee's Part I tax otherwise payable for a taxation year by a fraction: the numerator of that fraction, determined under paragraphs 122.3(c) and (d) of the Act, generally consists of the lesser of $80,000 and 80% of the individual's overseas employment income for the year; the denominator, determined under paragraph 122.3(1)(e), is the individual's income for the year (or, where section 114 of the Act applies, for the period or periods in the year throughout which the individual is resident in Canada) reduced by certain deductions listed in subparagraph 122.3(1)(e)(iii).

Paragraph 122.3(1)(e) is amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, as a consequence of changes to section 114 of the Act. The amendment makes no substantive change, but keeps the reference in step with the changes to section 114. Readers may refer to the notes on section 114 for more details.

Clause 16Foreign tax credit

Section 126 of the Act provides rules under which taxpayers may deduct, from tax otherwise payable, amounts they have paid in respect of foreign taxes. The present amendments introduce three sorts of changes to these "foreign tax credit" rules. Most importantly, a new foreign tax credit is introduced for non-resident individuals who were formerly resident in Canada. This new credit, along with a comparable credit for non-resident beneficiaries of trusts that are resident in Canada, is found in new subsections 126(2.21) and (2.22).

Second, the existing foreign tax credit for non-residents of Canada, in subsection 126(2.2), is modified to reflect changes to the rules that apply to emigrant taxpayers under subsection 128.1(4) of the Act.

Third, several of the provisions in section 126 are modified to take account of changes to section 114 of the Act.

All of these changes are described in detail in the following notes.

Subclause 16(1)

ITA

126(1)(b)(ii)(A)

Subsection 126(1) of the Act provides a tax credit in respect of foreign non-business income tax – that is, foreign taxes levied on investment and other non-business income. The credit is determined by multiplying the taxpayer's Part I tax otherwise payable for a taxation year by a fraction: the numerator of that fraction, determined under 126(1)(b)(i), consists of the taxpayer's income for the year (or, where section 114 applies, for the period or periods in the year throughout which the taxpayer is resident in Canada) from sources in the particular country calculated on certain assumptions; the denominator of that fraction, determined under paragraph 126(1)(b)(ii), consists generally of the amount by which the taxpayer's income for the year (or, where section 114 applies, for the period or periods in the year throughout which the taxpayer is resident in Canada) exceeds the deductions listed in subclause 126(1)(b)(ii)(A)(III).

Clause 126(1)(b)(ii)(A) is amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, as a consequence of changes to section 114 of the Act. The amendment removes a reference in subclause 126(1)(b)(ii)(A)(I) to section 114, updates the reference to that section in the following subclause, and simplifies subclause 126(1)(b)(ii)(A)(III)'s reference to the taxpayer's taxable income for the year. These changes keep the provision in step with the changes to section 114. Readers may refer to the notes on section 114 for more details.

Subclause 16(2)

ITA

126(2.1)(a)(I)(A)

Subsection 126(2.1) of the Act sets out a limit for the amount of a taxpayer's deduction under subsection 126(2) in respect of businesses carried on by the taxpayer in a country other than Canada.

The limit is the total of amounts computed under paragraphs 126(2.1)(a) and (b). The paragraph (a) amount is computed by multiplying the taxpayer's Part I tax otherwise payable for a taxation year by a fraction. The numerator of that fraction, determined under subparagraph 126(2.1)(a)(i), generally consists of a taxpayer's income for the year (or, where section 114 applies, for the period or periods in the year throughout which the taxpayer is resident in Canada) from businesses carried on by the taxpayer in the particular country. The denominator of this fraction, determined under subparagraph 126(2.1)(a)(ii), consists generally of the amount by which the taxpayer's income for the year (or, where section 114 applies, for the period or periods in the year throughout which the taxpayer is resident in Canada) exceeds the deductions listed in subclause 126(2.1)(a)(i)(A)(III).

Clause 126(2.1)(a)(ii)(A) is amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, as a consequence of changes to section 114. The changes update the references in the clause to section 114. Readers may refer to the notes on section 114 for more details.

Subclauses 16(3) and (4)

126(2.2)

Canada generally makes foreign tax credits available only to persons who are resident in Canada. The only current exception to this principle is subsection 126(2.2), which provides a foreign tax credit to a non-resident individual who, as an emigrant from Canada, made the election provided under existing subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv) of the Act in respect of one or more properties that were not taxable Canadian property.

With this election and the provision of security, the individual emigrant could choose to treat the properties as taxable Canadian property. That meant, on the one hand, that the individual was not treated as having disposed of those properties on emigration; but on the other hand, that any post-departure gain on the properties remained subject to Canadian tax (assuming no tax treaty applied). On the ultimate disposition of the deemed taxable Canadian property, subsection 126(2.2) allowed the former Canadian resident a credit for foreign tax on the gain.

Under the new rules for emigrants from Canada, the election in subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv) is no longer available.

Subsection 126(2.2) is therefore amended to apply only to properties that were deemed to be taxable Canadian properties under the election as it read before October 2, 1996. This amendment applies to the 1996 and subsequent taxation years.

Subsection 126(2.2) is also amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, to reflect the changes to section 114 of the Act. Readers may refer to the notes in respect of section 114 for further details.

Subclause 16(5)

ITA

126(2.21) and (2.22)

In some circumstances, an individual who is a former resident of Canada may be subject to tax in another country on a gain that accrued while the individual was resident in Canada, and that has already been subject to Canadian tax on emigration. Similarly, the non-resident beneficiary of a Canadian trust who receives trust property on a distribution may be taxed abroad on a gain that accrued while the property was held by the trust, and that has been taxed in Canada on the distribution.

EXAMPLE – double taxation of pre-departure gain

Lee emigrates from Canada to Treatyland at a time when he owns a house in Treatyland. Lee bought the house while resident in Canada; at the time of emigration, the house has an adjusted cost base of $60,000 and a fair market value of $100,000. The resulting $40,000 latent capital gain will produce a taxable capital gain of $30,000 immediately before departure, and that taxable capital gain will be subject to Canadian tax.

Assume that the house increases in value to $120,000 after Lee leaves Canada, and that Lee sells the property in 2005 for that amount.

In principle, the gain that has been subject to Canadian tax ought not to be taxed a second time. However, Treatyland may not yet recognize the tax effect of changes in residence and may simply tax Lee, when the property is disposed of, on the full amount of the his gain since first acquiring the property. In that case, Treatyland will tax not only the $20,000 gain realized since Lee left Canada, but also the $40,000 gain that accrued while Lee was resident in Canada. In the end, Lee is taxed twice on the same gain.

The best way to alleviate such results is to modify Canada's tax treaties to ensure appropriate recognition for the Canadian tax that arises on departure. However, treaty changes can take considerable time. As an interim measure, new subsection 126(2.21) provides limited credits against an individual's Canadian tax that arises in the year of the individual's departure from Canada, for post-departure foreign taxes. These foreign taxes can comprise both business-income and non-business-income taxes (defined in subsection 126(7)). New subsection 126(2.22) provides similar limited credits against a trust's Canadian tax that arose in the year of a distribution by the trust to a non-resident beneficiary, for the beneficiary's subsequent foreign taxes.

Subsections 126(2.21) and (2.22) will apply, in most cases, only to foreign taxes that are paid in respect of dispositions before 2007, and only for taxes paid to countries with which Canada has a tax treaty. Exceptions are provided for taxes imposed by a foreign country on gains on real property situated in that country. In keeping with the general international principle that the country in which real property is located has the first right to tax gains on that real property, Canada will always provide credit for such taxes. Similarly, credit for those taxes will be available regardless whether Canada has a tax treaty with the particular country.

More specifically, subject to the conditions described above, the credit provided to an individual under new subsection 126(2.21) is computed on a property-by-property basis, as the lesser of two amounts.

The first amount, described in paragraph 126(2.21)(a), is the total of those portions of the foreign taxes paid in respect of the disposition of the property that can reasonably be considered to relate to the portion of the gain or profit in question that arose before the individual's emigration from Canada. Where the property in question is real property situated outside Canada, the creditable taxes are those paid to the government of the country where the property is located or, if the property is disposed of before 2007, to the government of another country in which the individual is resident and with which Canada has a tax treaty.²

2. Note that a tax paid to the government of a political subdivision of a country is included for this purpose in the taxes paid to the government of the country. See the definitions "business-income tax" and "non-business-income tax" in subsection 126(7) of the Act.

The second amount, described in paragraph 126(2.21)(b), is in effect the amount of the individual's tax under Part I of the Act for the year of emigration that is attributable to the deemed disposition of the particular property under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. In determining this amount, previous applications of subsection 126(2.21) are taken into account.

EXAMPLE – operation of new credit

In the example above, Lee will be able to claim a credit for the lesser of 2/3 ($40,000/$60,000) of the Treatyland tax on the total amount of the gain, and the Canadian tax that arose because of the deemed disposition on emigration. The credit will be applied against Lee's Canadian tax for the emigration year, with amended subsection 152(6) allowing any necessary reassessment.

Note that since the property in question (a house) is real property, and the tax arose before 1997, Lee could also claim a credit for tax paid to another treaty country in respect of his pre-emigration gain, if he lived in that other country. For example, if the house were located not in Treatyland but in Nontreatyland, Lee could – as a resident of Treatyland – claim a credit in respect of both Treatyland tax and Nontreatyland tax. However, if Lee were resident in Nontreatyland, and the house were in Treatyland (or any country other than Nontreatyland), he could not claim a credit at all.

New subsection 126(2.22) sets out a comparable rule in respect of distributions after October 1, 1996 by Canadian-resident trusts to non-resident individuals. While the general operation of this rule is very similar to that of new subsection 126(2.21), it should be noted that in this case the credit involves two taxpayers: foreign taxes paid by the beneficiary are creditable against Canadian taxes paid by the trust.

A consequential amendment to subsection 152(6) of the Act ensures that any necessary assessments of tax will be made in order to take account of the effect of new subsections 126(2.21) and (2.22).

New subsections 126(2.21) and (2.22) apply to the 1996 and subsequent taxation years.

Subclauses 16(6) and (7)

ITA

126(3)

Subsection 126(3) of the Act provides a tax credit to Canadian-resident employees of international governmental organizations other than prescribed international governmental organizations. The amount of the credit is limited to the amount of any levy in lieu of taxes charged to the employee by the organization on the employee's remuneration.

The credit that may be claimed under subsection 126(3) is determined by multiplying the employee's Part I tax otherwise payable for a taxation year by a fraction. The numerator of that fraction, determined under paragraph 126(3)(a), consists of the employee's income for the year (or, where section 114 applies, for the period or periods in the year throughout which the employee is resident in Canada) from employment with the organization; the denominator of the fraction, determined under paragraph 126(3)(b), consists generally of the amount by which the employee's income for the year (or, where section 114 applies, for the period or periods in the year throughout which the employee is resident in Canada) exceeds the deductions listed in subparagraph 126(3)(b)(iii).

Subsection 126(3) is amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, to revise its references to section 114 of the Act to reflect changes to that section. Readers may refer to the note in respect of section 114 for further details.

Clause 17

Changes in Residence

ITA

128.1

Section 128.1 of the Act sets out the income tax effects of becoming or ceasing to be resident in Canada. The present amendments make several important additions to section 128.1, including:

- a more comprehensive deemed disposition of property by individual emigrants;
- greater clarity as to the exclusion of certain pension and other rights from the deemed dispositions on emigration and immigration;
- special accommodation of individuals (other than trusts) who, having emigrated from Canada, re-establish residence in Canada within 60 months or less;
- the ability for post-emigration losses in effect to reduce gains realized as a result of the deemed disposition on emigration; and
- in certain circumstances, a deemed end to the fiscal period of a business carried on by an individual emigrant.

In addition, these amendments make a number of clarifying and updating changes to section 128.1. They also revise the section as necessary to reflect other amendments such as the restructured definition "taxable Canadian property" and the changes to section 114 of the Act.

Subclause 17(1)

ITA

128.1(1)(b)(i)

Subsection 128.1(1) of the Act sets out rules that apply where a taxpayer becomes resident in Canada. Paragraph 128.1(1)(b) treats a taxpayer who becomes resident in Canada as having disposed of the taxpayer's property, with certain exceptions, for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value. This disposition is deemed to have taken place immediately before the time that is immediately before the time at which the taxpayer becomes resident.

The properties excluded from the deemed disposition on immigration under paragraph 128.1(1)(b) are essentially those properties that were, ignoring any relevant tax treaty, already subject to tax in Canada. Subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(i) sets out one type of excluded property, being taxable Canadian property. Subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(i) is amended, with application after October 1, 1996, to simplify its description of taxable Canadian property. This change is a consequence of the relocation of the main definition of taxable Canadian property to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Subclause 17(2)

ITA

128.1(1)(b)(iv) and (v)

In its current form, subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(iv) provides that, where a taxpayer has elected on an earlier emigration that a property not be subject to a deemed disposition at that time, the property is also not deemed to have been disposed of on the taxpayer's re-establishment of residence in Canada. Since one of the effects of having made that election (set out in existing subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iv)) is that the property will have been deemed to be taxable Canadian property, which is in any case excluded from an individual's deemed disposition on emigration, the current version of subparagraph (iv) is not clearly necessary. The subparagraph can therefore be replaced with a different rule.

New subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(iv) excludes from the deemed disposition on immigration any property described in subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(iii) to (v). Those provisions list a number of kinds of rights to receive payments, including pension and similar benefits.

Subparagraph 128.1(1)(b)(v) excludes from the deemed disposition on immigration a stock option that is subject to section 7 of the Act. This subparagraph is amended to update its language.

These amendments apply to changes in residence that take place after October 1, 1996.

Subclause 17(3)

Fiscal Period

ITA

128.1(4)(a.1)

Subsection 128.1(4) sets out rules that apply where a taxpayer ceases to be resident in Canada. New paragraph 128.1(4)(a.1) provides that the fiscal period of any business carried on by an individual emigrant (other than a trust), otherwise than through a permanent establishment in Canada, is deemed to have ended immediately before the emigration time and a new fiscal period of the business is deemed to have begun at the emigration time. This ensures the appropriate measurement of the individual's pre-departure income or loss from the business. The paragraph, which applies to changes in residence after October 1, 1996, also allows the emigrant to choose a new fiscal period of the business.

Deemed Disposition

ITA

128.1(4)(b)

Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) treats a taxpayer who ceases to be resident in Canada as having disposed of the taxpayer's property, for proceeds equal to fair market value. This disposition is deemed to have taken place at a "time of disposition" that is immediately before the time that is immediately before the time the taxpayer ceases to be resident. The time of cessation of residence is referred to in the provision as the "particular time" and in these notes as the "emigration time."

Where the taxpayer is an individual, certain types of property are exempted from the deemed disposition. These properties, generally, are those that would be subject to Canadian taxation in the hands of a non-resident.

Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) is amended to ensure that this policy is better reflected in the legislation. Under amended paragraph 128.1(4)(b), an individual emigrant from Canada is treated as having disposed of all property other than:

- (i) real property situated in Canada, Canadian resource properties and timber resource properties;
- (ii) property of a business carried on by the taxpayer, at the emigration time, through a permanent establishment in Canada – including capital property, eligible capital property and property described in the inventory of the business;
- (iii) rights to receive specified pension and similar payments, including rights under RRSPs, RRIFs, DPSPs, and rights to various other benefits;
- (iv) rights to certain benefits under employees profit sharing plans, employee benefit plans (except the plans described in subparagraph (v)), employee trusts and salary deferral arrangements;
- (v) rights to benefits under certain employee benefit plans (EBPs) that are in substance salary deferral arrangements, to the extent the benefit relates to the taxpayer's service in Canada;
- (vi) certain property of short-term residents (see below);
- (vii) employee stock options that are subject to section 7 of the Act;
- (viii) interests in specified trusts, generally linked to employee compensation (but not including an interest in a trust governed by an EBP);
- (ix) interests in personal trusts resident in Canada, provided the interests were never acquired – by any person – for consideration and did not arise through a qualifying disposition as defined in subsection 107.4(1) of the Act;
- (x) interests in non-resident testamentary trusts, provided the interests were never acquired – again, by any person – for consideration;

- (xi) interests in life insurance policies in Canada, other than interests in segregated fund policies; and
- (xii) certain property of a short-term non-resident (see the notes on new subsection 128.1(6) of the Act).

Under new subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(vi), an individual (other than a trust) who has been resident in Canada for 60 months or less during the 10-year period preceding the cessation of residence is not deemed to dispose of any property that the individual owned on becoming resident in Canada, or that the individual inherited after becoming resident here. (This exception was formerly provided under subparagraph 128.1(4)(b)(v).)

Where an individual (other than a trust) re-establishes Canadian residence within 60 months of having ceased to be a resident, a special rule, set out in new subsection 128.1(6), enables the individual to exclude all property from the deemed disposition in respect of the cessation of residence. Readers may refer to the notes on new subsection 128.1(6) for further details.

Amended paragraph 128.1(4)(b) generally applies after October 1, 1996. In addition, clause 18 provides that an individual who ceased to be a Canadian resident after 1992 and before October 2, 1996 may also choose to exclude rights to receive a pension or similar payments, rights under most employee benefit plans and certain trust interests from the deemed disposition in respect of the cessation of residence. This election must be made in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue within six months of these amendments receiving Royal Assent. It should also be noted that this election will cause amended subparagraph 115(1)(a)(i) of the Act to apply. Readers may refer to the notes on that provision for more details.

Subclause 17(4)

Individual – elective disposition, etc.

ITA

128.1(4)(d) to (e)

Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) treats taxpayers that cease to be resident in Canada as having disposed of their property, subject to certain exceptions, for proceeds equal to the property's fair market value. Paragraph 128.1(4)(d) allows an individual (other than a trust) to choose to treat certain of the properties that would otherwise be exempt from that deemed disposition as having been disposed of. An emigrant might make this choice if, for example, the emigrant wanted to realize a latent loss on such a property in order to offset a gain resulting from the deemed disposition.

This optional deemed disposition is retained in amended paragraph (d). In addition, the paragraph reproduces the effect of existing paragraph 128.1(4)(f), which ensures that losses realized as a result of a paragraph (d) election may only offset the increase, if any, in the taxpayer's income as a result of the deemed disposition on emigration. With this effect now provided in paragraph (d) itself, paragraph (f) is no longer necessary and is repealed.

New paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) is introduced to ensure appropriate tax consequences where an individual (other than a trust) emigrates from Canada holding shares of a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) issued under an employee stock option plan. Section 7 of the Act provides for an income inclusion in respect of shares issued to an employee under such a plan. Generally, this employment benefit is included in the employee's income in the year that the stock option is exercised. Subsection 7(1.1) provides an exception in the case of shares of a CCPC: the income inclusion generally takes place only in the year in which the employee disposes of or exchanges the shares. New paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) applies to reduce the individual's proceeds of disposition in respect of such shares by the amount, if any, that would have been added to the shares' adjusted cost base under paragraph 53(1)(j) of the Act had subsection 7(1.1) applied to the disposition. This amendment ensures that the measurement of the individual's gain on the share takes into account the amount that will eventually be taxed under section 7.

EXAMPLE – CCPC shares acquired under employee stock option

From 1993 to 1998, Katharine was employed by a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC). Part of Katharine's compensation for 1995 was an option to buy 100 shares of the corporation at a price of $1 a share. In 1996, when the shares were worth $2 each, Katharine exercised the option. In 1999, when the shares are worth $6 each, Katharine emigrates from Canada.

Under amended paragraph 128.1(4)(b), Katharine will be treated as having disposed of the shares for proceeds of $600 ($100 \times \6 fair market value). Ordinarily, disposing of the shares would trigger an income inclusion of $100 under subsection 7(1.1), a deduction of $25 in computing taxable income under paragraph 110(1)(d.1), and a taxable capital gain of $300 ($.75 \times ($600 - $200)$). As a result of new subsection 7(1.6), however, Katharine will not be subject to any income inclusion under section 7 in respect of the disposition. New paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) will deduct from her proceeds of disposition of the shares the $100 that paragraph 53(1)(j) would have added to their adjusted cost base if there had been such an income inclusion, and Katharine will be treated as having realized her $300 taxable capital gain.

Existing paragraph 128.1(4)(e) relates to the election, under existing subparagraph (b)(iv), to exclude from the deemed disposition on emigration a property that is not taxable Canadian property. If an emigrant uses this optional exclusion, paragraph (e) treats the property as taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer until the property is disposed of or the taxpayer returns to Canada. Since the subparagraph (b)(iv) election is no longer available, paragraph (e) is repealed.

New paragraph 128.1(4)(d.1) applies to changes in residence after 1992. The other amendments described above apply to changes in residence after October 1, 1996.

Subclause 17(5)

Instalment Interest

ITA

128.1(5)

Sections 155 and 156 of the Act set out rules for computing the instalment obligations of individuals for a taxation year.

Subsections 161(2), (4) and (4.01) of the Act set out rules for computing the interest payable by taxpayers on any deficiency in instalments made during a taxation year.

New subsection 128.1(5) of the Act provides a special rule for computing the instalment and instalment interest obligation of an individual for a taxation year in which the individual ceases to be a resident of Canada. This subsection applies to exclude, in computing an individual's liability for instalments for the year, the tax attributable to any deemed disposition under paragraph 128.1(4)(b), where that paragraph has the effect of increasing the individual's total tax payable under Parts I and I.1 for the year.

New subsection 128.1(5) applies to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

Returning former resident

ITA 128.1(6)

New subsection 128.1(6) of the Act provides special rules that apply to an individual (other than a trust) who re-establishes Canadian residence at a particular time that is within 60 months of the individual's date of emigration (the "emigration time"). These rules allow the individual in effect to unwind the application of paragraphs 128.1(4)(b) and (c) to properties that were owned by the individual throughout the period beginning at the emigration time and ending at the particular time.

In broad terms, new subsection 128.1(6) means that an emigrant who returns to Canada within 5 years of emigration will no longer be treated as having realized accrued gains on departure. Four points should be noted about these rules. First, because there is no certain way of knowing which emigrants will return to Canada, this rule does not directly affect the obligations that arise on emigration. Rather, the rule does allow the returning individual retrospectively to modify the obligations. As a practical matter, it is expected that most individuals who plan to return to Canada will use the security provisions of section 220.1 to defer payment of any tax arising as a result of emigration. In that case, the main effect of new subsection 128.1(6) will be to allow the security to be given back intact to the returning emigrant.

Second, these rules do not affect any interest or penalties owing by an individual, including interest and penalties levied on taxes in respect of the individual's emigration, calculated without reference to the rule.

Third, these rules include features designed to prevent surplus-stripping. Without these features, a resident of Canada could use a temporary period of non-residence to extract, as dividends subject only to low-rate withholding tax, value that represents accrued gains.

Fourth, the rules require separate elections in respect of taxable Canadian property (paragraph (a)) and other property (paragraph (c)). The effects of the elections differ: the paragraph (a) election removes taxable Canadian properties from the deemed disposition and reacquisition on emigration, subject to special rules in paragraph (b); while the paragraph (c) election adjusts the emigration proceeds of disposition and the returning adjusted cost base of the other properties. Each election covers all property of the given sort, but the returning individual may choose to make one election and not the other.

Paragraph 128.1(6)(a) allows the individual to make an election in respect of property that was taxable Canadian property at the emigration time and throughout the period that the individual was non-resident. The effect of making this election is that paragraphs 128.1(4)(b) and (c) do not apply in respect of all such properties of the individual for the taxation year that ended at the emigration time.

Where an individual has made an election under paragraph 128.1(6)(a), paragraph 128.1(6)(b) provides special surplus-stripping rules in respect of the property covered by the election. The basic purpose of paragraph (b) is to ensure that gains that accrued before emigration from Canada, and that have been extracted in the form of dividends during the individual's residence abroad, are subject to Canadian tax as gains.

Paragraph (b) applies, in respect of a paragraph (a) taxable Canadian property, where two conditions are met:

- a loss has accrued on the property during the individual's period of non-residence – that is, the property's fair market value immediately before the individual becomes resident is less than its fair market value when the individual left Canada; and
- if the individual had acquired the property for its fair market value on emigration, and disposed of the property immediately before becoming resident, new subsection 40(3.7) (which applies to current and former non-resident individuals a version of the stop-loss rules in section 112 of the Act) would reduce the loss.

Where these conditions are met, paragraph (b) has four related effects. First, it treats the individual as having disposed of the property immediately before emigration, notwithstanding the paragraph (a) election. Second, it establishes the individual's proceeds of disposition of the property at that time, as the total of:

- (A) the adjusted cost base of the property on emigration; and
- (B) the amount, if any, by which the notional loss reduction under subsection 40(3.7) exceeds the lesser of (I) the adjusted cost base on emigration, and (II) an amount chosen by the individual.

Third, paragraph (b) treats the individual as having reacquired the property on emigration, at a cost equal to the excess, if any, of the property's adjusted cost base on emigration (the (A) and (B)(I) amount above) over the lesser of the notional loss reduction under subsection 40(3.7) and the amount chosen by the individual in (B)(II) above.

The practical result of the second and third effects is that the income (in this case, dividends) that gives rise to the notional subsection 40(3.7) loss reduction is recharacterized as gains. Those gains are, subject to election, distributed between the post-return period and the deemed disposition on emigration.

Fourth, paragraph (b) treats the individual, for the purposes of new section 119 of the Act, as having disposed of the property immediately before returning to Canada. This ensures that appropriate credit is given for any tax withheld under Part XIII of the Act on the income that triggered the application of paragraph (b).

EXAMPLE – 128.1(6)(b)

Marie emigrates from Canada in 1999. Marie is the majority shareholder of a Canadian-controlled private corporation (CCPC) when she leaves Canada. The shares, which are taxable Canadian property to Marie, have a fair market value (FMV) at that time of $50,000 and an adjusted cost base (ACB) of $15,000, for a latent gain of $35,000. Marie receives $35,000 of dividends from the CCPC in 2000. In 2001, Marie returns to Canada. At that time, the shares have a FMV of $15,000. Marie uses the election in subsection 128.1(6) to minimize the tax consequences of her earlier emigration from Canada.

If Marie actually disposed of the shares immediately before re-establishing Canadian residence, subsection 40(3.7) of the Act would reduce her loss. Therefore, paragraph 128.1(6)(b) applies in respect of the shares.

Under paragraph 128.1(6)(b), Marie is treated as having disposed of and reacquired the shares on emigration. Assuming she elects $10,000, Marie's emigration proceeds of disposition are deemed to be $40,000, being the emigration ACB ($15,000) plus the difference between the subsection 40(3.7) reduction ($35,000) and the ACB/specified amount ($10,000). Marie thus realizes a $25,000 capital gain in the emigration year.

Marie's reacquisition cost is deemed to be $5,000, being the original ACB ($15,000) minus the lesser of the subsection 40(3.7) reduction ($35,000) and the specified amount ($10,000). Since the shares have a FMV of $15,000, Marie will eventually realize a gain of $10,000 (subject to other adjustments to ACB and FMV).

The result is that Marie's $25,000 gain on departure and remaining $10,000 latent gain equal the $35,000 she extracted in the form of dividends. The full $35,000 will thus be realized as capital gains, and section 119 will give Marie credit for any withholding tax she paid on the dividends.

Marie could have altered the timing of her capital gains on the shares. For example, if she had elected an amount of $5,000 under paragraph (a) in respect of the property, Marie's emigration proceeds of disposition would have been $45,000 ($15,000 ACB + ($35,000 40(3.7) reduction - $5,000 elected amount)), giving an emigration gain of $30,000. This would have been balanced by an increase in Marie's reacquisition cost from $5,000 to $10,000, which in turn would reduce the eventual gain Marie will realize on the shares. *

New paragraph 128.1(6)(c) allows the returning individual to make an election, in respect of each property the individual owned at the emigration time and throughout the non-resident period that is subject to a deemed acquisition on immigration, under paragraph 128.1(1)(c) of the Act. In general, this describes property other than taxable Canadian property. The election adjusts, on a property-by-property basis, both the proceeds of disposition that were deemed to arise as a consequence of the deemed disposition in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) on the individual's earlier emigration, and the deemed acquisition cost under paragraph 128.1(1)(c).

Specifically, each of these amounts is adjusted by subtracting the least of:

- the amount that would otherwise be the individual's gain on the property as a result of the deemed disposition in paragraph 128.1(4)(b),
- the fair market value of the property immediately before the individual becomes resident in Canada, and
- any other amount specified by the individual.

As a result of these adjustments, the returning individual can defer Canadian tax on any gain that had accrued before emigration, while still protecting from Canadian tax gains that accrued during periods of non-residence.

EXAMPLE – 128.1(6)(c)

Noah emigrates from Canada in 1999. Noah owns shares of a foreign corporation. When Noah leaves, the shares have a fair market value of $25,000 and an adjusted cost base of $15,000, for an accrued gain of $10,000. In 2001, Noah returns to Canada. At that time the shares have a fair market value of $80,000. Noah chooses to take advantage of the election in paragraph 128.1(6)(c) to control the tax consequences of ceasing to be a Canadian resident. Because he had a capital loss in 1999 of $7,000 from another source, Noah is content to realize a $7,000 capital gain on emigration, but he does not want to realize the other $3,000 accrued gain. Noah therefore chooses an elected amount of $3,000.

Noah's proceeds of disposition under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) are deemed to be $22,000, being the proceeds of disposition that would otherwise be determined under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) ($25,000) minus the least of:

- the amount that would have been Noah's gain on the shares under 128.1(4)(b) had this paragraph not applied ($10,000);
- the fair market value of the property at the particular time ($80,000); and
- the elected amount specified ($3,000).

Noah thus reduces his emigration-year gain to $7,000. The same $3,000 that reduces Noah's emigration proceeds is also subtracted from his reacquisition cost under paragraph 128.1(1)(c) ($80,000), leaving his new adjusted cost base in respect of the property $77,000. The property thus has a latent gain of $3,000 at the time Noah re-establishes Canadian residence.

Noah could have deferred tax on the full $10,000 gain that accrued before emigration, by increasing his elected amount in respect of the shares to $10,000.

New subsection 128.1(6) applies to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996. The subsection provides that, notwithstanding the Act's ordinary rules governing assessments, any necessary assessments of tax will be made in order to take account of the effect of new paragraph 128.1(6)(c).

Post-emigration loss

ITA

128.1(7)

New subsection 128.1(7) of the Act provides relief to an individual (other than a trust) who disposes of a taxable Canadian property, after having emigrated from Canada, for proceeds that are less than the deemed proceeds that arose under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) in respect of the property when the individual emigrated.

Under subsection 128.1(7) the individual may elect to reduce the proceeds of disposition that were deemed to arise under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) in respect of a property by the least of:

- an amount specified by the individual;
- the amount that would be the individual's gain from the deemed disposition of the property under paragraph 128.1(4)(b), but for this subsection; and
- the amount that would be the individual's loss from the disposition of the property at the time the property is actually disposed of, if the loss were determined with reference to every other provision in the Act (including the stop-loss rules in subsection 40(3.7) and section 112 of the Act) but this subsection.

The same amount is added to the individual's proceeds of disposition realized at the time of actual disposition.

EXAMPLE – 128.1(7)

Odile emigrates from Canada in 1999, owning a capital interest in a Canadian trust. The interest has a fair market value at that time of $150,000 and an adjusted cost base of $40,000, for a latent gain of $110,000 on departure. Odile's tax is assessed on that basis, and she posts security for the tax.

In 2001, Odile sells her trust interest for $60,000. Since Odile has realized a smaller gain than assumed in her tax assessment on emigration, she elects under subsection 128.1(7) to reduce the gain she was deemed to have realized when she emigrated.

To obtain the maximum benefit from the subsection, Odile specifies an amount of $90,000 in respect of the election. Her proceeds of disposition at the emigration time are deemed to be $60,000, being the proceeds of disposition that would otherwise be determined under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) ($150,000) minus the least of:

- the amount specified ($90,000);
- the amount that would have been her taxable gain in respect of the trust interest under 128.1(4)(b) had this paragraph not applied ($110,000); and
- the amount that would have been her loss on actual disposition of the trust interest had this paragraph not applied ($150,000 - $60,000 = $90,000).

The same $90,000 amount is added to Odile's proceeds of the actual disposition of the trust interest. The result is that, in respect of the trust interest, Odile is treated as having realized a $20,000 gain in 1999, and no gain or loss on the actual disposition of the property in 2001.

It should be noted that the election in subsection 128.1(7) does not affect any interest or penalties owing by the individual at the time of making the election, including interest and penalties levied on taxes in respect of the property, calculated without reference to the subsection.

A consequential amendment to subsection 152(6) of the Act ensures that any necessary assessments of tax will be made in order to take account of the effect of new subsection 128.1(7).

New subsection 128.1(7) applies to changes in residence that occur after October 1, 1996.

Clause 18

Transition

Paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act treats a person who ceases to be resident in Canada as having disposed of most of the person's properties. The changes these proposals introduce to that deemed disposition apply, as a general matter, after October 1, 1996.

However, certain of the changes are relieving clarifications of the scope of the deemed disposition. This clause allows a taxpayer who ceased to be resident in Canada after 1992 and before October 2, 1996 to elect that those relieving changes apply to that cessation of residence. It should be noted that such an election, which must be made in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue before the end of the sixth month following Royal Assent to these proposals, will also cause certain changes to section 115 of the Act to apply.

Readers may consult the notes on section 115 and subsection 128.1(4) of the Act for more information.

Clause 19

Former resident – replaced shares

ITA
128.3

New section 128.3 of the Act applies to shares ("old shares") that were received in exchange for other shares ("new shares") on a tax-deferred basis pursuant to section 51 (convertible property), subparagraphs 85.1(1)(a)(i) or (ii) (transfer of property to a corporation by shareholders), section 86 (exchange of shares by a shareholder in the course of a reorganization of a company's capital) or section 87 (amalgamation) of the Act. For the purposes of subsections 126(2.21) and (2.22), 128.1(6) and (7) and 180.1(1.4), and sections 119, 220.1 and 220.2, the individual is deemed not to have disposed of the old shares, and the new shares are deemed to be the old shares. This ensures that the relief available under those provisions is not lost as a result of such a share-for-share exchange.

New section 128.3 applies after October 1, 1996.

Clause 20

Mutual Fund Corporations

ITA

131(8.1)(a)

Section 131 of the Act sets out rules relating to the taxation of mutual fund corporations and their shareholders.

Subsection 131(8.1) of the Act provides that a corporation is not a mutual fund corporation after a particular time if, at that time, it is reasonable to conclude that the corporation was established or maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident persons. Two conditions provide exceptions to this rule. The first of these conditions, which is set out in paragraph 131(8.1)(a), is met if, throughout the period that started on February 21, 1990 (or if later, the date of incorporation) and that ends at the particular time, all or substantially all of the corporation's property consisted of property other than Canadian real property, options therein and other taxable Canadian property.

Paragraph 131(8.1)(a) is replaced, with effect after October 1, 1996, with new wording that incorporates changes in the definition of "taxable Canadian property" and the movement of that definition from paragraph 115(1)(b) of the Act to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Clause 21Non-Resident-Owned Investment Corporations

ITA

133

Section 133 of the Act provides rules for the taxation of non-resident-owned investment corporations on a basis that approximates the treatment that would apply if its non-resident shareholders had invested directly in Canada.

Subclause 21(1)Computation of Income

ITA

133(1)(c)

Subsection 133(1) of the Act provides rules for computing the income and taxable income of a non-resident-owned investment corporation. Paragraph 133(1)(c) provides that the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses that are included in computing such a corporation's income are those from dispositions of taxable Canadian property.

Paragraph 133(1)(c) is amended, with application after October 1, 1996, to reflect the changes in the definition of "taxable Canadian property" and that definition's movement from subsection 115(1) to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Subclause 21(2)Definitions

ITA

133(8)

"Canadian property"

Subsection 133(8) of the Act sets out certain definitions that apply for the purposes of section 133.

Paragraph (a) of the definition of "Canadian property" in subsection 133(8) is amended, with application after October 1, 1996, to reflect the changes in the definition of "taxable Canadian property" and that definition's movement from subsection 115(1) to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Subclause 21(3)

Definitions

ITA

133(8)

"capital gains dividend account"

Subsection 133(8) of the Act sets out certain definitions that apply for the purposes of section 133.

The description of "M" in paragraph (c) of the definition of "capital gains dividend account" in subsection 133(8) is amended, with application after October 1, 1996, to reflect the changes in the definition of "taxable Canadian property" and that definition's movement from subsection 115(1) to subsection 248(1) of the Act.

Clause 22

Reassessments

ITA

152(6)

A number of provisions of the Act allow a taxpayer to carry back amounts from one taxation year to reduce the taxpayer's income, taxable income or tax for a prior year. Where an amount is carried back under one of these provisions, subsection 152(6) of the Act directs the Minister of National Revenue to reassess the taxpayer's tax for any relevant year or years to take the carry-back into account.

Subsection 152(6) is amended to include in its list of carry-back provisions new section 119 and new subsections 126(2.21) and (2.22) and 128.1(7). These additions apply to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996. As well, a taxpayer who wishes to use the newly-added provisions will be deemed to have filed the prescribed form required under subsection 152(6) in a timely manner if the form is filed on or before the later of the normal deadline for filing and the day that is six months after Royal Assent to these proposals.

Clause 23

Election on Emigration

ITA

159(4) and (4.1)

Subsections 159(4) and (4.1) of the Act allow an individual who has ceased to be resident in Canada to elect to pay any tax resulting from the deemed disposition of property under subsection 128.1(4) of the Act in up to six annual instalments, provided the individual gives the Minister of National Revenue adequate security.

The present proposals include, in new sections 220.1 and 220.2 of the Act, more comprehensive and more liberal security rules than these. Subsections 159(4) and (4.1) are therefore repealed, with application to individuals who cease to be resident in Canada after October 1, 1996.

Clause 24

Interest – Effect of carryback of loss, etc.

ITA

161(7)(a)

Section 161 of the Act provides for the payment of interest on outstanding amounts of tax payable under Part I of the Act, as well as on late or deficient instalments in respect of such tax.

Subsection 161(7) provides that, where the amount of tax payable for a taxation year is reduced because of certain deductions or exclusions arising from tax credits, the carryback of losses, or events in subsequent years, interest on any unpaid tax for the taxation year is calculated without regard to the reduction until the latest of several dates.

Paragraph 161(7)(a) is amended to include in its list of deductions and exclusions: a deduction under new section 119 of the Act in respect of the disposition of a taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer in a subsequent year; a deduction under new subsection 126(2.21) or (2.22) of the Act in respect of a disposition in a subsequent year; and a deduction under new paragraph 128.1(6)(c) or subsection 128.1(7) of the Act in respect of an election in a subsequent year.

These amendments apply to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996.

Clause 25

Effect of carryback of loss, etc.

ITA

164(5)

Section 164 of the Act relates to tax refunds. Subsection 164(5) provides that, where the tax payable for a taxation year is reduced because of listed deductions or exclusions that relate to subsequent years, interest payable to a taxpayer on any resulting overpayment of tax is to be calculated as if the overpayment had arisen on the latest of several dates.

These amendments add to subsection 164(5)'s list of deductions and exclusions: a deduction under new section 119 of the Act in respect of a disposition of taxable Canadian property by a taxpayer in a subsequent taxation year; a deduction under new subsection 126(2.21) or (2.22) in respect of foreign taxes paid for a subsequent taxation year; and a deduction under paragraph 128.1(6)(c) or subsection 128.1(7) in respect of an election in a subsequent taxation year.

These amendments apply to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996.

ITA
164(5.1)

Subsection 164(5) of the Act provides that, where the tax payable for a taxation year is reduced because of certain deductions or exclusions arising from tax credits, the carryback of losses, or events in subsequent years, interest payable to a taxpayer on any resulting overpayment of tax is to be calculated as if the overpayment had arisen on the latest of several dates. Subsection 164(5.1) of the Act, which deals with the calculation of interest on repayments of amounts in dispute, parallels the rules contained in subsection 164(5).

Subsection 164(5.1) is amended to simplify its structure and to accommodate the new deductions listed in the notes on subsection 164(5), above.

This amendment applies to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996.

Clause 26

Individual Surtax

180.1

Section 180.1 of the Act imposes a surtax on individuals at a rate of 3% of the tax payable under Part I of the Act. An additional 5% surtax is imposed on that portion of an individual's Part I tax in excess of $12,500.

Subclause 26(1)

Former resident – credit for tax paid

ITA
180.1(1.4)

New subsection 40(3.7) of the Act provides a "stop-loss" rule that may apply to reduce the loss of an individual from the disposition of property at a particular time, where the individual was non-resident at any time before the particular time and received dividends in respect of the property while non-resident. New section 119 of the Act provides a special tax credit in certain cases where subsection 40(3.7) applies to an individual who ceased to be resident in Canada. If an individual's Part I tax for the year that includes the emigration is less than the amount deductible under section 119, new subsection 180.1(1.4) of the Act provides that the individual may deduct the balance from the tax otherwise payable under Part I.1 for that year.

New subsection 180.1(1.4) applies after October 1, 1996.

Subclause 26(2)

Meaning of tax payable under Part I

ITA

180.1(2)(a) and (b)

Subsection 180.1(2) of the Act provides rules for calculating Part I tax for the purposes of determining the base for tax under Part I.1 of the Act ("surtax"). Essentially, the tax base for surtax is the individual's tax payable for the year under Part I of the Act, calculated without reference to certain amounts.

Paragraphs 180.1(2)(a) and (b) are amended to add to the list of those amounts an amount deductible under new section 119 of the Act in respect of a former resident of Canada.

These amendments apply after October 1, 1996.

Clause 27

Security for departure tax

ITA

220.1

New subsection 220.1 of the Act permits an individual to elect, on giving security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property (other than an employee benefit plan right) in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. If such an election is made, interest and penalties do not start to accrue on the amount secured until such time as the amount becomes unsecured, as described below.

ITA

220.1(1)

New subsection 220.1(1) of the Act allows an individual to elect, in prescribed manner, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. To understand how the subsection works, several points should be noted.

- The security rule is in a mechanical sense applied annually. That is, the Minister's obligation to accept security applies for one year at a time. This does not mean that the emigrant must file a renewed election each year, but only that the Minister will determine on an annual basis whether, and in what amount, the security may remain in place.
- While the election to provide security must ordinarily be made – and the security itself must be provided – on or before the individual's balance-due day for the year of emigration, special accommodation is provided for those who ceased to be resident before these proposals receive Royal Assent. Those individuals have until three months after Royal Assent to make the election and provide the security.
- The provision requires the Minister of National Revenue to accept "adequate security." The adequacy of any particular proposal for security is a matter of fact. It is understood, however, that in respect of tax on a gain from the deemed disposition of shares of a corporation, the Minister will not exclude the possibility of accepting some or all of the shares as security.

Where an individual has elected under subsection 220.1(1) and has provided adequate security, the Minister of National Revenue must, for a particular taxation year that begins after the individual ceases to be a resident of Canada, accept adequate security for the lesser of two amounts. The amounts are, in effect:

- (i) the individual's taxes under Parts I and I.1 of the Act for the emigration year, to the extent those taxes are attributable to the deemed disposition under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of properties that have not been disposed of before the particular year; and
- (ii) if the particular year does not immediately follow the emigration year, the amount for which security was accepted for the preceding taxation year.

Where an individual who emigrated from Canada actually disposes, in a given year, of a property that was the subject of a deemed disposition on emigration, the Minister's obligation to accept security for the tax attributable to the deemed disposition of that property lasts only until the individual's balance-due day for the given year. The amount for which the Minister must accept security, in respect of a given departure from Canada, may thus decrease from year to year as the former emigrant disposes of properties. The amount cannot, however, increase.

An amount of tax may also become unsecured if the security furnished by the taxpayer for the tax has ceased to be adequate. For further commentary in respect of inadequate security, see the note to subsection 220.1(4), below.

The effects of the acceptance of security by the Minister under subsection 220.1(1) are, first, that the Minister will not take any action to collect the tax so secured, and second, that for the purpose of computing interest owing by the taxpayer, the amount secured will be treated as an amount paid on account of the tax liability.

New subsection 220.1(1) generally applies to dispositions that occur after October 1, 1996. However, as noted above, elections made and security furnished under this subsection will be considered timely if effected before the end of the third month following the month that includes the particular day on which this Act is assented to.

Deemed security

ITA

220.1(2)

New subsection 220.1(1) of the Act permits an individual to elect, on giving adequate security to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. New subsection 220.1(2) treats an individual (other than a trust) as having furnished acceptable security to the Minister for the lesser of $25,000 and the greatest amount of tax for which the Minister is required to accept security under subsection 220.1(1) for any particular taxation year of the individual. The deemed security is treated as having been furnished by the individual before the individual's balance-due day for the year in which the individual ceased to be a resident of Canada.

The effect of this provision is to excuse individual emigrants (other than trusts) from the requirement to provide security for their first $25,000 of tax resulting from the deemed disposition on emigration.

New subsection 220.1(2) applies after October 1, 1996.

Limits

ITA

220.1(3)

New subsections 220.1(1) and (2) of the Act set out rules respecting the posting of security for tax that is owing as a result of a deemed disposition of property under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. New subsection 220.1(3) limits the amount of tax that may be so secured to the total tax payable under Parts I and I.1 of the Act in respect of the application of paragraph 128.1(4)(b) in the taxation year that the individual ceased to be a resident of Canada (calculated without reference to any of the deductions or exclusions listed in paragraph 161(7)(a) of the Act).

New subsection 220.1(3) applies after October 1, 1996.

Inadequate Security

ITA

220.1(4)

New subsection 220.1(1) of the Act permits an individual to elect, on giving security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. If such an election is made, interest and penalties do not accrue on the particular amount secured until such time as the amount becomes unsecured.

If the Minister should determine, at any time, that the security accepted under subsection 220.1(1) is not adequate to secure the particular amount for which it was furnished by the individual, new subsection 220.1(4) provides that the security secures the part of the particular amount for which it is adequate security at that particular time; the balance of the particular amount is unsecured. The Minister is required to notify the individual in writing if part of the particular amount becomes unsecured in this manner, and the individual has the opportunity to furnish further security to the Minister within 90 days of being so notified. Where additional security is so furnished, the Minister is deemed to have accepted it in accordance with subsection 220.1(1).

New subsection 220.1(4) applies after October 1, 1996.

Extension of Time

ITA

220.1(5)

New subsection 220.1(1) of the Act permits an individual to elect, on giving security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. This election must be made, and the security furnished, on or before the balance-due date for the taxation year that the individual ceased to be a resident of Canada. Subsection 220.1(4) permits an individual to furnish additional security to the Minister, where the Minister has notified the individual that security previously furnished is no longer adequate. The additional security must be so furnished within 90 days of the Minister's notification.

New subsection 220.1(5) permits the Minister to extend the time available to an individual to make an election or to furnish security under subsection 220.1(1), or to furnish additional security under subsection 220.1(4), where the Minister considers it just and equitable to do so.

New subsection 220.1(5) applies after October 1, 1996.

New section 220.2 of the Act permits a trust to elect, on the giving of security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that it owes as a result of the distribution of a taxable Canadian property to a non-resident beneficiary. If such an election is made, interest and penalties do not start to accrue on the amount secured until such time as the amount becomes unsecured. Section 220.2 is structured in a similar manner to new section 220.1.

Section 220.2 applies where such a distribution is made and, only because of subsection 107(5), the rollover paragraphs 107(2)(a) to (c) do not apply to the distribution. Provided that the trust makes an election on or before the trust's balance-due day for the distribution year (or at a later time permitted under subsection 220.2(4)) and furnishes security before that balance-due day (or at a later time permitted under subsection 220.2(4)), the Minister is required to accept security in respect of each taxation year after the distribution year of an amount up to the amount specified under paragraph 220.2(1)(c) in respect of that subsequent year. The amount is required to be accepted until the balance-due day for that subsequent year.

The amount specified under paragraph 220.2(1)(c) for a particular taxation year of a trust is equal to the lesser of the following two amounts:

- the portion of the trust's total tax payable under Parts I and I.1 (determined without reference to loss carrybacks and other amounts specified under paragraph 161(7)(a)) for the distribution year that would not have been payable if each such distribution of taxable Canadian property (other than taxable Canadian property subsequently disposed of before the beginning of the particular year) had not occurred; and
- where the particular year does not immediately follow the distribution year, the amount so specified for the taxation year of the trust that immediately precedes the particular year.

The relief with regard to arrears interest is provided under new paragraph 220.2(1)(d). This provision provides that interest is generally payable as if the particular amount for which adequate security is accepted at any time under subsection 220.2(2) in a particular period ending on the balance-due day for a taxation year subsequent to the distribution year had actually been paid on account of the trust's taxes under Parts I and I.1 for the distribution year. The particular amount in respect of a period that ends on a trust's balance-due day for a subsequent taxation year cannot exceed the amount specified under paragraph 220.2(1)(c) for the year. In addition, the particular amount is constrained because of the limit under subsection 220.2(2). However, paragraph 220.2(1)(d) does not apply with respect to interest on unpaid tax instalments which is dealt with under new subsection 107(5.1).

Subsection 220.2(2) limits the amount for which the Minister is considered to have accepted as security under subsection 220.2(1), in order to take into account reductions as of any day, for the purpose of computing arrears interest, in the calculation of taxes under Parts I and I.1 arising from the carryback of losses and similar amounts. The effect of subsection 220.2(2) is to limit the amount of acceptable security as of any day in respect of a trust's tax payable for a distribution year to:

- the total taxes payable by the trust under those Parts for the distribution year, determined without reference to such reductions that occur after that day

MINUS

- the total taxes payable those Parts, determined without reference to such reductions and as if the rollover rules in subsection 107(2) had applied to distributions in the distribution year not covered by those rules only because of subsection 107(5).

Subsection 220.2(3) provides rules which apply where security furnished by a trust under subsection 220.2(1) ceases to be adequate. These rules are essentially the same as the rules in subsection 220.1(4). As noted above, subsection 220.2(4) allows for the late filing of elections and the late furnishing of security. Subsection 220.2(4) is essentially the same as subsection 220.1(5).

These amendments apply to distributions that occur after October 1, 1996. However, transitional measures treat elections made, and security furnished, up to three months after Royal Assent as having been made at such time as to maximize the benefits under subsection 220.2(1).

Definitions

ITA
248(1)

Section 248 of the Act defines a number of terms that apply for the purposes of the Act, and sets out various rules relating to the interpretation and application of various provisions of the Act.

Subclause 28(1)

ITA
248(1)

"taxable Canadian property"

One of the key concepts in the Act is the concept of "taxable Canadian property." The term is used for a variety of purposes, mostly but not exclusively to do with the taxation of non-residents and migrants. The scope and functions of the term are, however, less than fully clear, in part because the Act currently includes two definitions. The main definition, in subsection 115(1) of the Act, appears to apply for all purposes of the Act. A second definition, however, is provided in subsection 248(1) of the Act. This second definition both confirms the meaning assigned in subsection 115(1) and provides an extended meaning for certain limited purposes.

To clarify the meaning of "taxable Canadian property" and to simplify the Act, the definition in subsection 248(1) of the Act is made the only one, and the substance of the existing subsection 115(1) definition is incorporated into it. In addition, certain changes are made to the definition to reflect its policy basis and to harmonize its components.

Under this new single definition, taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer at any time in a taxation year includes property of the taxpayer that is:

- (a) real property in Canada,
- (b) property used by the taxpayer in carrying on a business in Canada, other than
 - (i) property used in carrying on an insurance business, and
 - (ii) where the taxpayer is non-resident, ships and aircraft used principally in international traffic and related personal property, if the country in which the taxpayer is resident does not tax the gains of persons resident in Canada from dispositions of such property,

- (c) if the taxpayer is an insurer, its designated insurance property for the year,
- (d) unlisted shares of Canadian-resident corporations (other than a mutual fund corporations),
- (e) unlisted shares of non-resident corporations if, at any time during the 60-month (currently 12-month) period that ends at that time, the value of the company's Canadian real and resource properties made up more than half the fair market value of all of its properties, and more than half of the fair market value of the share was derived directly or indirectly from such properties,
- (f) listed shares that would be described in paragraph (d) or (e) if they were unlisted, or shares of a mutual fund corporation, if at any time during the 60-month period that ends at that time the taxpayer and non-arm's length persons owned 25% or more of the issued shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation,
- (g) certain partnership interests, if at any time in the 60-month (currently 12-month) period that ends at the time, most of the partnership's value is attributable to Canadian property,
- (h) capital interests in trusts (other than unit trusts) that are resident in Canada,
- (i) units of unit trusts (other than mutual fund trusts) that are resident in Canada,
- (j) units of a mutual fund trust if, at any time during the 60-month period that ends at that time, not less than 25% of the units of the trust belonged to the taxpayer and non-arm's length persons,
- (k) interests in a non-resident trust if, at any particular time during the 60-month (currently 12-month) period that ends at that time, the trust met a test comparable to the one described in respect of a non-resident corporation in (e) above, and

- (l) property deemed by any provision of the Act to be taxable Canadian property.

In addition to listing the above types of property, the new definition includes three special rules. First, a property described in the list is deemed to include any interest in or option in respect of the property, whether or not the property actually exists. Second, the extended meaning of "taxable Canadian property, which now applies for the purposes of sections 2, 128.1 and 150, and for the purpose of applying paragraphs 85(1)(i) and 97(2)(c) to a disposition by a non-resident person, is preserved. That extended meaning includes in "taxable Canadian property" Canadian resource properties, timber resource properties, income interests in trusts resident in Canada, rights to a share of the income or loss under an agreement referred to in paragraph 96(1.1)(a), and life insurance policies in Canada. Third, the exclusion from "taxable Canadian property" of certain shares of non-resident-owned investment corporations, currently found in the subsection 115(2) definition, is preserved in the new one.

The amended definition of "taxable Canadian property" applies after October 1, 1996.

Clause 29

Additions to taxable Canadian property

ITAR

26(30)

Section 26 of the Income Tax Application Rules sets out the method for computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of certain capital property owned by the taxpayer at the end of 1971. The general purpose of section 26 is to prevent gains that accrued before 1972 from being subject to tax.

Subsection 26(30) of the Rules provides that dispositions by non-residents persons of certain types of property are not within the application of subsections 26(1.1) to (29) of the rules. Essentially, these are properties that became taxable Canadian properties because of changes to the definition "taxable Canadian property" that took effect in April, 1995. The relief provided by section 26 is not needed for such properties, as subsection 40(9) of the Income Tax Act ensures that a non-resident person's gains or losses on the disposition of such properties are limited to those that accrued after April 1995.

This amendment to subsection 26(30) of the rules ensures that the provision does not apply to property that becomes taxable Canadian property as a result of these proposals. The amendment applies to dispositions that occur after October 1, 1996.

Clause 30

Income Tax Regulations 2606(2)

Part XXVI of the Income Tax Regulations sets out rules for computing an individual's income earned in a taxation year in a particular province.

Subsection 2606(1) of the Regulations provides for an adjustment to an individual's income earned in a particular province where the sum of the individual's incomes earned in each province and in countries other than Canada exceeds the individual's income for the year.

Subsection 2606(2) of the Regulations provides a further adjustment for the purposes of subsection (1) where the individual is non-resident for part of a taxation year only.

Subsection 2606(2) of the Regulations is amended, with application to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years, to reflect changes proposed to section 114 of the Act. Reference may be had to the notes on section 114 for further details.
